About NewGenLib.

An enterprise resource planning system (ERP) for the library that allows for the tracking of materials possessed, orders placed, bills paid, patrons who have borrowed items, and document searches on a variety of categories such as author, title, year of publication, publisher, and many more An information management system (ILS) typically consists of a relational database, software to interact with the database, and two graphical user interfaces (GUIs) (patrons & staff). The majority of ILS/LMSs segregate software functions into distinct programmes known as modules, each of which is connected with a unified interface to form a unified interface. These are the ones: acquisitions (ordering, receiving, and invoicing materials).

Processing or cataloguing on a technical level (classifying and indexing of materials).

Circulation is important (lending materials to patrons and receiving back)

Management of Serial Numbers (Journals).

MIS Reports are a type of report that is used to track and analyse data (Backend Reports)

OPAC (Online Public Access Catalog/Public User Interface) is an abbreviation for Online Public Access Catalog/Public User Interface.

Features:

Functional modules are completely web based. Uses Java Web StartTM Technology.

Compatibility – Complies with international metadata and interoperability standards: MARC-21,

MARC-XML, z39.50, SRU/W, OAI-PMH.

Uses chiefly open source components.

Scalable, manageable and efficient.

OS independent – Windows and Linux flavours available.

Z39.50 Client for federated searching

Internationalized application (11 8N)

- Unicode 4.0 complaint.

- Easily extensible to support other languages.

- Data entry, storage, retrieval in any (Unicode 3.0) language.

RFID integration: Book Tags, Gate Antennas, Work Station, Handheld Reader, Self-KIOSK.
